THE HOLY DAY OF ATONEMENT:
17TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE HISTORIC MILLION MAN MARCH

On that day, Monday, October 16, 1995, there was a sea of Black men, many who stood for 10 hours or more sharing, learning, listening, fasting, hugging, crying, laughing and praying.

The world did not see thieves, criminals and savages as usually portrayed through mainstream music, movies and other forms of media: On that day, the world saw a vastly different picture of Black men in America. The world saw Black men demonstrating the willingness to shoulder the responsibility of improving themselves and the community. There was neither one fight nor one arrest that day. The Washington Mall, where the March was held, was left as clean as it was found. Two of the best descriptions of the Million Man March include the word "miracle" and the phrase "a glimpse of heaven."

During The Honorable Minister Louis Farrakhan's message to the millions gathered in the mall and those watching on television around the world that day, he explained to the world the need for Atonement and he laid out the eight steps of atonement. Thus, for the past 17 years, people gather, reflect and observe this historic day.
