North Carolina Treasurer JANET COWELL

This weekend, state treasurers from across the country will gather in beautiful Asheville, North Carolina to discuss policy ideas and innovations in the world of public finance. I am proud to host my colleagues in Asheville, where North Carolina's natural beauty, cultural scene, and Southern hospitality will be on full display.

I am also proud that in our current climate of partisan challenges and gridlock, state treasurers of all political stripes will be meeting in our state to share ideas and discuss how best to protect retirement for families, be effective stewards of public money, improve financially distressed local governments, and positively impact the communities in which we serve.

The best ideas don't belong to any group or any state – they're just the best ideas. I look forward to a productive session of working together with fiscal leaders from across the nation to turn solid ideas into solutions, and to put the solutions to work for the people and families of North Carolina.

I hope you will join me in welcoming our national guests, along with the positive, bipartisan collaboration to our beautiful state.

Janet
