City Startup Labs Accepting New Applicants for the Entrepreneurs Academy

Founder Henry Rock wants to create a new class of entrepreneurs

CHARLOTTE, NC (December 17, 2014) - City Startup Labs, a program designed to teach entrepreneurship to young adult African American men is now accepting applications for its next class.

City Startup Labs' mission is to stimulate entrepreneurial activity and innovation within inner-city America. The program, which provides accelerated entrepreneurial instruction and support, will start its 2nd round in January 2015 with a class of 25 student/entrepreneurs.

The Academy, a 15-week boot-camp, includes curricula on planning, starting, and running a successful new venture. Upon completion, the student/entrepreneurs will have an opportunity to pitch their ideas and compete for prize money and incubation at Charlotte's startup hub, Packard Place, as well as Queen City Forward, the city's social-enterprise accelerator. Micro-funding will also be available to promising ventures.

Applications are available at the Urban League offices at 740 W. 5th Street, Charlotte 28202 or online at www.citystartuplabs.com/apply-now.
