WE'RE HUNGRY FOR YOUR IDEAS

Do you have an innovative idea for increasing healthy food access and eliminating hunger in Charlotte?

Innovation Challenge: Plenty is a competition for entrepreneurs with innovative ideas to meet serious issues around food insecurity and hunger in our community. Anyone is encouraged to apply with new ideas or established programs that are ready to tackle the problems of food deserts, lack of access to healthy food, nutrition education for at-risk populations, or child and senior hunger.

Apply now for your chance to win a cash prize of up to $10,000 and the chance to present your idea at a community event on November 12.

The deadline for applications is October 22. Don't miss the chance to turn your idea into a reality!

Want to hear these great ideas? Save the date for the Innovation Challenge: Plenty final event on November 12.

Need inspiration?

Here's an idea from ThinkPlenty Weekend: #FoodForAllChallenge, similar to the ALS Ice Bucket Challenge, encourages people to create food challenges for their friends to complete, like eating hot peppers in 5 under minutes, or eating a sleeve of Saltines without having any water. Friends may either complete the challenge or alternatively donate money to local food banks. Be on the lookout as we share more ideas!
