The troubling story of how a cadre of influential scientists and politicians have clouded public understanding of scientific facts to advance political and economic agendas. [\[watch the trailer here\]](#)

This film will be followed by a discussion with local experts and community leaders on how misinformation is being used by the fossil fuel industry to mislead the public, fuel climate skepticism, and impede critical action on climate change. We'll uncover who's behind the misinformation in North Carolina and dissect the arguments claiming that climate change science is not settled, and that renewable energy in North Carolina hurts low-income urban and rural communities. We'll also answer one important question together: what can we do together to expose this intentional and misleading behavior and ensure that our communities see the positive impacts from economic and environmental justice in their lifetime?

Brought to you by the North Carolina Sierra Club, North Carolina League of Conservation Voters, and the Justice Action Mobilization Network.
