Protest Leak into the Classroom

"As a Black male educator, I feel the pain of my brothers and sisters who are living in fear, I know the pain of my Black male scholars whose future lies in the hands of those who have no clue what it is like to be Black in America, and I empathize the pain of those who know what true freedom looks like but are stricken to the cycle of poverty." Dominique Stone is a Family Advocate for Sedgefield Middle School in Charlotte, NC. Hear his story around the Charlotte protest.

An Attempt to Elevate the Teaching Workforce

A new bill is being introduced to the House of Representatives that would guide legislation on the task of elevating the teacher workforce. The bill, tentatively called the “Innovations to Recruit and Retain Excellent Teachers Act”, proposes to elevate the teaching profession through systemic innovations in teacher recruitment and retention to ensure students, especially those from low-income families, are taught by excellent, well-prepared, and well-supported teachers.
