How we're going to fund this race:

Steve -

Dark money and corporate money have no place in our democracy. Most of us can agree that the corrupting influence of big money is the worst part of our broken political system. And in North Carolina, we've seen the link between the money, the corruption and the election fraud that took place right here on the ground.

That's why we're doing things differently in our race. Some folks may say I'm foolish to do this. But we're committed to doing things the right way and rejecting business as usual:

Today I'm proud to announce that we're rejecting all corporate PAC money in this campaign. We're going to depend on the people to power our effort. When I'm in Congress, the voters will know: my vote isn't for sale.

But this means we're going to need a lot of people chipping in small amounts of money — whatever they can afford. We're launching an important drive to help us get started:

Will you make your first contribution to our race as part of our 72-hour fundraising drive? Whatever you can afford will go a long way.

I know this race will be expensive. And yes, I know that my Republican opponents are unlikely to take this pledge. But this is about ridding our politics of the corruption that's poisoned our democracy, and that means running a campaign that reflects our values.

This drive is not just about how much money we raise, but how many individual donations we receive to power our effort. Each one sends a powerful message about the strength of our movement to get big money out of politics.

So please, make a $3 donation today to help us kick off this effort:

Thank you in advance for your support. It means the world to me. Together, we can change our broken politics and protect our democracy.

Let's do this,

Dan
