Here's how things are looking

Steve -

The dust has settled from Tuesday's Republican primary, so we wanted to let you know how things are looking.

We'll start with the good news: We have our opponent, and there was no need for a runoff. That means the general election has started, and Election Day is just around the corner.

But here's the bad news: We're up against Dan Bishop, the architect of the 2016 "bathroom bill" that discriminated against the LGBTQ community. He's got a far-right agenda that has no business representing us in Congress.

But special interests and DC insiders are already stepping up to buy this seat for him. They're likely to spend millions trying to drown out our message.

But their dark money is no match for grassroots power. But that means we need you with us now if we want to flip this district.

Make a \$3 donation to help us fight back against the dark money and attacks coming our way. Our 72-hour fundraising drive ends tomorrow, and we need your help to kick off the general election.

Thanks for standing with us in this critical moment.

All our best,

Team McCready
