This race could go either way.

Steve, we wanted to make sure you saw our race update. The new polling is just the latest indication of how close this race will be.

It's the people vs. DC special interests here. Our opponent is counting on dark money to drown out our message, but we're running a grassroots campaign that can win.

Dan isn't taking a dime of corporate PAC money. That means we're counting on a lot of people to chip in to our campaign. Will you make your first donation today?

This race could go either way. That's why we need your support now to make sure we can reach as many voters as possible.

Steve -

As you probably know, our race is the last undecided House race of 2018, and our special election is underway.

With Election Day quickly approaching, we wanted to give you a quick update on this race and how close it will be.

FIRST: The margin was just 905 votes in November, before the results were thrown out because of the massive election fraud perpetrated by our opponent's campaign.

THEN: The special election was called, and our race was rated a tossup by multiple election forecasters.

NOW: We got our first poll of the general election, and we're down by just 4% (within the margin of error).

As we enter the final stretch, we've got a tough fight ahead. This is a district that President Trump won by almost 12 points, and the fact that the race is so close is an amazing testament to our grassroots team.

Just like last time, this race will come down to a razor-thin margin — maybe even a handful of votes. We're taking nothing for granted and fighting for every vote.

The DC special interests are already spending for our opponent. They see a chance to drown out our message with false attack ads and buy a seat in Congress. If we're going to beat them, then we need lots and lots of grassroots supporters like you to have our back.

Will you make a \$3 donation to our race right now? We'll put it to work immediately reaching new voters and fighting back against the attacks on our campaign.

Let's go win this thing!
