Dear Sarah,

Last week's Knight Media Forum drew more than 600 participants to Miami, many of them leaders of foundations that are funding local journalism or who want to learn how to enter the field smartly.

In between lively discussions on national trends in media and communities, breakout sessions dove deeply into local experiments and budding success stories in the effort to build a sustainable future for local news.

You can find a recap of the event here, including plenary session videos and links to breakout session notes.
