Dear Sarah,

Across the country, artists are using their craft to rise to the moment — pushing for change at the intersection of race, equity and justice.

This week, on the debut episode of DISCOVERY, a weekly show from the Knight Arts team, we'll talk with Michael O'Bryan, founder of HUMANNATURE and director of learning at The Village of Arts and Humanities. He'll discuss the critical role the arts play in addressing systemic issues in communities and in promoting equity.

Each week on DISCOVERY, we'll hear from arts leaders as we explore the crucial role of the arts and artists in building informed and engaged communities. We hope you'll join us this week and for future episodes as we continue these important conversations.

(Fri, June 19, 1 p.m. ET)

Michael O'Bryan is an expert practitioner and budding researcher in the fields of community development, organizational culture and human wellbeing. He has spent more than a decade working directly with resilient but underserved communities.
