For the Land, the Air, the Water, and the PEOPLE!

Environmental Justice Is Creative Culture is the second installation of Sol Nation's Environmental Justice Is campaign. We explore how creative culture is a necessary part of movements including the environmental movement. Check out what we have in this edition

Commentary: Creative Culture is Revolutionary

Before Covid 19, morning rides to school would be filled with the sounds of Hip Hop Speaks to Children, poetry, songs, and joy with my child. Now, there are no more morning rides and we have to place masks on our faces when we are in public spaces. I'm reminded of one of the poems from Hip Hop Speaks to Children, We Wear The Mask by Paul Laurence Dunbar performed by Oni Lasana. If masks are the protection from COVID-19, what are the masks of protection from environmental injustices? What about chronic racial injustices? Or is it time to remove all of the masks so that we can get to SOLutions?

ICYMI: In Case You Missed It

Last month was the first installation of our Environmental Justice is... campaign. We explored the intersection of EJ and food sovereignty and how educating and equipping people to feed themselves can lead to positive, direct impacts to climate change. We don't want to leave you out so check out the Sol Story and Commentary from last month.
