Justice for kids is what we do!

Hello, friends,

If you are like me, reflecting on the shock of current events has you asking yourself, "What can I do? Where can I send my dollars to directly impact the racial disparities in our justice system?"

The Council for Children's Rights has been fighting for social justice and civil rights for children and teens in the Charlotte area for over 40 years. The social workers and public defenders are there to untangle messy, traumatic situations and connect kids to immediate, life-changing help. The Council is directly addressing issues of racial disparity and the school-to-prison pipeline.

Please donate now.

I truly believe in this organization. I've been on the board for three years and have seen firsthand the incredible impact of their work on the lives of local children.

Warmly,

Ellen Leitch
