Sept. 7 – 11

Join us from home to engage in live conversations about the future of our communities and democracy.

STANFORD CYBER POLICY CENTER
Social media and democracy
featuring national cyber policy experts
 Tuesday, Sept. 8, 12 p.m. ET | 9 a.m. PT

From misinformation to hate speech to political advertising, social media is delivering content that affects our society and democracy. In "Social Media and Democracy: The State of the Field and Prospects for Reform," scholars at the Knight-supported, cross-disciplinary Stanford Cyber Policy Center will explore how online content impacts democratic information ecosystems, and how to mitigate its worst effects.

COAST TO COAST
Leveraging parks and public spaces for schools during COVID-19

with Green Schoolyards America's Sharon Danks
 Tuesday, Sept. 8, 1 p.m. ET | 10 a.m. PT

How can schools leverage greenspaces during COVID-19? How can parks and public spaces provide a safer space for outdoor learning? On Episode 17 of "Coast to Coast," we'll hear from Sharon Danks, CEO and founder of Green Schoolyards

America, a nonprofit that helps schools use their outdoor areas more strategically to improve the well-being of children, their communities and the urban environment. Together, we'll talk about how schools can use outdoor spaces as they reopen to help with physical distancing measures.

Hosted by Lilly Weinberg | Director/Community Foundations at Knight Foundation

THE FUTURE OF DEMOCRACY
The American vote: what's at stake
with Human Rights Watch's Nicole Austin-Hillery
Thursday, Sept. 10, 1 p.m. ET | 10 a.m. PT

This fall, as the nation continues to take on the coronavirus, several critical things are at stake — including the fate of voting rights for Americans. On Episode 20 of “The Future of Democracy,” we’ll talk with Nicole Austin-Hillery, executive director of the Human Rights Watch U.S. program. She’ll share a historical look at voter suppression, voting rights, and understanding the top issues facing our country as we head to the polls.

Hosted by Sam Gill | Knight Foundation SVP/Chief Program Officer

DISCOVERY
From live to livestream
with No Proscenium's Kathryn Yu
Friday, Sept. 11, 1 p.m. ET | 10 a.m. ET

Performers and arts organizations of every stripe are adapting to the constraints of a socially distanced audience and are utilizing communications technology like Zoom, podcasts, and social media to reach remote audiences in new ways. On Episode 10 of “DISCOVERY,” we’ll talk with Kathryn Yu, executive director of No Proscenium, an organization that explores how performers experiment with remote performances. Together, we’ll explore what performing arts organizations can learn from these early experiments and what opportunities exist to create rewarding experiences for attendees and creators alike.

Hosted by Chris Barr | Director/Arts + Technology Innovation at Knight Foundation
