Happy Labor Day, Steve!

Today is about celebrating the American Labor movement and all of the advancements it has made for working conditions in this country.

The labor movement ensured that working families have safe working conditions, better wages, more reasonable hours, and more. Especially now, our unions are at the forefront of the fight for fairer working conditions for everyone -- from sick leave, to pay equity.

In the midst of this pandemic and the USPS in crisis, today is a reminder of why this movement is so important and the work we need to do to support working families. As your next Congresswoman, I look forward to fighting together for workers' rights.

Today, let's honor all of the hard work and that our unions have done to make our country stronger and commit to doing more to lift up working families for the future.

Warm regards,

Cynthia Wallace
