Steve,

Today I am deeply saddened at the loss of Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, an undeniable champion for defending equality and justice and fighting for a more perfect union. Women and girls admired her because of her dedication to this country and her incredible work ethic for the American people.

In a year filled with so much pain, this is an incredible loss.

But even in this moment of deep, sincere sadness and loss, we cannot lose sight of her legacy and how much is at stake at this moment in our nation. When healthcare, equality and our democracy are all on the line, we, too, must be dedicated to making this country stronger, fairer and more just in her honor.

Justice Ginsburg famously returned to the court shortly after the passing of her beloved husband to read an important opinion she had authored. That is the strength we all must carry with us for the next 45 days in the face of so much loss and fear.

The stakes in this election just got higher. And it is up to us to fight for Justice Ginsburg and all that she stood for in her absence. It is what she would have wanted.

Fighting with you,

Cynthia
