New Insights on Race & Polarization in America

TED JOHNSON
Brennan Center for Justice

ANTHEA BUTLER
University of Pennsylvania

EMILY EKINS
Cato Institute

RAVI PERRY
Howard University

Recent research finds that Americans have greatly different perceptions of the discrimination and racism that Black Americans experience. It also shows that the composition of our social networks matter. What factors drive these differences in perception? How do these divergent and increasingly polarized realities play out in American communities? How can we work to bridge these divides?

Building the future: digital transformation in museums

Thursday, Oct. 29, 1 p.m. ET | 10 a.m. PT

EPISODE 16: BUILDING THE FUTURE: STRUCTURING DIGITAL TRANSFORMATION IN MUSEUMS
with guests: Kate Haley Goldman and Loïc Tallon

How were museums approaching digital before COVID-19 and what do they think about digital opportunities going forward? We'll discuss the challenges and opportunities for digital transformation in America's museums. We'll also explore how museums can structure their digital work to better reach the communities they serve.

Guests

Kate Haley Goldman, principal, HG&Co
Loïc Tallon, expert associate partner, McKinsey & Company

Host

Chris Barr, Knight Foundation director for arts and technology innovation
