CHRONICLE OF PHILANTHROPY
Reimagining democracy: how philanthropy can support civic life
Monday, Nov. 30, 2 p.m. ET | 11 a.m. PT

Amid the aftermath of the 2020 elections, we've been left with questions and concerns about the health of our democracy. What are new ways in which philanthropic organizations can address these challenges? How can philanthropy continue to ensure pathways to economic opportunity? In this second conversation from the reimagining democracy series, we'll chat with leading thinkers who shared their ideas about philanthropy and civic life in the recent collection of essays commissioned by Kettering and Knight foundations, "Democracy and Civic Life: What is the Long Game for Philanthropy?"

Guests
Frank Fukuyama, political scientist, Stanford University
Brian Hooks, chairman and CEO, Stand Together
Safiya Noble, co-founder and co-director, UCLA Center for Critical Internet Inquiry

Host
Stacy Palmer, editor, Chronicle of Philanthropy

DISCOVERY
Performing arts: connecting with audiences through and beyond the pandemic

Thursday, Dec. 3, 1 p.m. ET | 10 a.m. PT

Performing arts organizations and institutions, which generally depend on in-person audiences and experiences, have been hit hard during the pandemic. How can these cultural institutions create meaning for and connection to audiences? We'll discuss the challenges — and the opportunities — to create a new normal for the performing arts.

Guest

Henry Timms, president and CEO, Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts

Host

Victoria Rogers, VP/Arts, Knight Foundation

INFORMED & ENGAGED

What to expect after the unexpected: 2021 predictions

Thursday, Dec. 10, 1 p.m. ET | 10 a.m. PT

With each new year comes a sweeping new sentiment of hope. But will 2021 look any different from 2020? On Episode 18 of "Informed and Engaged," the Knight Foundation partners with the Nieman Journalism Lab and the Nieman Foundation at Harvard University to share 2021 predictions for journalism and informed communities. How do some of the smartest people working in journalism and digital media imagine the field will change, against the backdrop of a year that delivered a global pandemic, a new U.S. presidential administration, massive protests to right racial injustice, and extreme weather events? Join us for this provocative conversation.
