Mix It Up This March

While mixing prints and patterns can seem like a tough trend to tackle, Stacee will prove that pulling off this trend is totally doable. Check out these three tips and stylish looks Stacee pulled together after a quick shopping trip at the GW boutiques. These outfits and hundreds more will be available in Stacee's exclusive collection at both boutique locations.

Play With Proportions

You don't have to shy away from blending prints in the same family—simply pair a bigger version with a smaller one. Also look at the boldness of the pattern. A small subtle plaid can pair nicely with a bolder buffalo check pattern. Stacee put together this spring ensemble by matching a colorful striped scarf to a midi dress with subtle, tiny blue stripes. Then, she highlighted the scarf's other bright shades by adding lively orange shoes and a pink crossbody, which pulled the entire look together!

Build Around a Base Color

Achieving the visual balance you want from print mixing relies on a complementary color palette. Inverted color schemes work great where the base color of a print is a secondary color in the other piece. Stacee created this look using a small dainty print on top to match the bold mustard yellow in the patterned skirt. With this look's mod-meets-hippie vibes, Stacee added chunky white sandals and some cool transparent circle sunglasses.

Break It Up With a "Third Piece"

You can easily blend two prints by adding a "third piece" in a complementary solid color, especially one that crosses the body, like a jacket, belt or crossbody purse! A big, feminine floral blouse is paired with this skinny stripe in a coordinating shade of pink. Then, a gorgeous faux-leather jacket ties it all together while giving a little visual reprieve from the two printed pieces. This entire outfit is less than $40 at the GW location in South End!
