Join the New Rural Project's
Volunteer Corp

Steve,

Last week was the start of Black History Month. As I look back on the Black trailblazers who paved the way for me to be where I am today, I think about all of the trials and tribulations they have endured over the years just to be seen as equal in a society that couldn't care less about them. I can't help but think about the African Americans who still, to this day, feel unheard, underrepresented, and left behind by this government.

That is one of the major reasons I joined the team at the New Rural Project – to engage young and marginalized residents of color in rural communities to amplify their voices through increased civic and electoral engagement. With rampant voter suppression and gerrymandering targeting our voters, engaging residents in every corner of our state, including rural communities, is the number one thing we can do to save our democracy.

From hosting vaccine clinics to canvassing in our neighborhoods, the New Rural Project is busy building strong relationships in the communities we serve ahead of the 2022 elections. As we scale up our efforts, we're counting on our growing Volunteer Corp to help us make these programs a reality. Please consider volunteering with us.
