Hi there,

Since you've been following the Obama Foundation's work for a while now, you already know why Barack and I think so highly of the next generation of leaders and why we're working tirelessly to inspire, empower, and connect them with each other.

I've had the chance to meet so many of these young people over the years, and no matter where they were in the world—from the South Side of Chicago to rural Vietnam—one thing has always united them: their unflinching belief in a better future.

Thanks to your support, that future is closer than ever.

Girls around the world are getting the education they deserve through the Girls Opportunity Alliance.

The My Brother's Keeper Alliance has worked at the community level to offer thousands of boys and young men of color across the United States new opportunities to help them learn, grow, and succeed.

Hundreds of emerging leaders are taking their work to the next level thanks to the Obama Foundation Leaders Africa, Asia-Pacific, and Europe programs and our Obama Foundation Scholars program.

And here in the United States, a promising group of 100 college students are embarking on careers in public service as Voyager scholarship recipients.

None of this would be possible without your generosity.

With a donation of any size, you can say yes to empowering adolescent girls, helping boys and young men of color thrive, and developing the next generation of changemakers. And—today only—your donation will be matched thanks to the support of generous donors.

Can I count on you for a donation today?
