New RURAL PROJECT

The logo for the New Rural Project features a stylized globe in the center of the word 'PROJECT'. The globe is composed of several curved lines in shades of blue, green, and orange, representing the Earth's curvature and the organization's focus on rural communities.

Dear Steve:

With the national holiday highlighting the legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. (MLK) upon us, I'm reflecting on this quote from Dr. King: "Life's most persistent and urgent question is, 'What are you doing for others?'" Volunteering and helping others is something that I've always enjoyed and participated in. One of the reasons I love working for New Rural Project is because volunteerism and community service are key elements in the DNA of New Rural Project.

We are thankful every day for the volunteers who have joined us on this journey, knowing that what we strive to achieve will not be realized in a month or a year, but will be built slowly, door-by-door and conversation-by-conversation, in the communities that we serve.

NRP will be busy across our rural counties, participating in activities in honor and support of the MLK Weekend. We are particularly excited that NRP will participate in our first MLK parade! We will join the Richmond County MLK Celebration Foundation Inc. on Saturday, January 14th, for their MLK parade and march, which is part of their weekend long celebration of Dr. King and his legacy. We would love to have our supporters join us in Rockingham, NC, as we march through town, spreading the word about NRP and our mission to uplift and magnify the voices of our rural communities.

Volunteer to march with us!

If you're not able to march with us, here are some other things you can do:

1. Check out our social media pages (Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and YouTube) as we share other MLK Weekend activities happening across our two counties in North Carolina.
2. Check your local newspaper or television websites for how you can celebrate and participate in MLK weekend activities in your area.
3. Sign up to volunteer with us in other ways in the future here.

In gratitude,

Quanisea (Nisea) Moses
