The awards include a $10,000 first prize, a $5,000 second prize and honorable mention awards of $1,000.

Entries should serve the public by holding the powerful to account, shining a light on a pervasive or underreported community problem, or breaking new ground on an issue. The work will be judged by the quality of analysis and storytelling, rigor of newsgathering, inclusion of community voices and the impact on public understanding or action.
