In the 6th Annual Talking Policy in the Queen City, presented by The University of North Carolina at Charlotte's Public Policy Ph.D. Program, our panelists will share their expertise and insights gained from academia, research, and firsthand experience in the Charlotte community.

Each speaker brings a unique perspective, contributing to a comprehensive dialogue that aims to deepen our understanding of the complex issues surrounding homelessness and housing policy.

The Ph.D. program, which has operated for over 20 years, also presents a research poster presentation session to highlight the work of its doctoral students with a light reception. Learn More.

Highlights:

Gain insights into the latest research findings and academic perspectives on homelessness and housing policy.

- Hear firsthand experiences and initiatives from community leaders actively addressing the issue.
- Participate in a Q&A session to engage directly with the panelists.
