Natasha MARCUS

NC Commissioner of Insurance

Hi Steve,

My cats try to eat my yogurt and wake me up too early — and they love to block the camera during my Zoom calls! Even still, as a proud mom of two adorable cats, I understand the importance of family in all its forms. Recently, JD Vance's harmful comments about "childless cat ladies" have shown his disdain for those of us who cherish our furry family members.

His policies — and his disturbing suggestion that women without families should have less of a say than women who do — are even worse. Vance's stance is decidedly anti-woman. As if his rhetoric wasn't damaging enough, Trump and Vance's dangerous Project 2025 supports dramatic changes to the insurance system our citizens rely on, including ending federal flood insurance, which would leave over 200,000 North Carolina homeowners without protection.

I'm running to be the first woman Commissioner of Insurance in North Carolina. I'm proud to be on the same Democratic ticket with Vice President Kamala Harris. Won't it make misogynists like JD Vance and Trump furious when we win? My opponent, "Rate Hike Mike," has a history of making decisions that hurt North Carolinian families by raising insurance rates. We need transparency and accountability, not policies that make it harder for families to thrive.
