Natasha MARCUS

NC Commissioner of Insurance

Steve, when I speak to North Carolinians at campaign events across the state, this is always one of the first things I ask. It's a question folks don't expect — it always gets a chuckle or two. Just about everyone in the room pays an insurance bill, so of course just about everyone raises their hand!

And then I say, "If your hand is up, you should care who your Commissioner of Insurance is because it directly impacts your wallet."

In a room full of voters with raised hands, it is abundantly clear just how important this race is and how much we need to elect a new Commissioner of Insurance. Because the guy we've had for the past eight years is not working for us.

North Carolina is one of just eleven states in the country where the people have the power to vote on and elect our Commissioner of Insurance. And the person we elect to this position every four years has the sole authority to set the maximum rates insurance companies can charge North Carolinians for home, auto and worker's comp insurance. That's a lot of power in one person -- voters don't always realize how much their decisions on election day can impact their lives and budgets. This race, though paramount in determining a major expense in every household, is often overlooked.

My opponent, incumbent Commissioner of Insurance "Rate Hike Mike" Causey, has spent the last eight years in the role taking advantage of the fact that voters don't realize how much this position affects them and their families. He's gotten away with approving an unprecedented number of rate hikes, ran from every opportunity to hold public hearings, and solidified his reputation as a Commissioner of Insurance who doesn't stand up for us.

This November, you have the opportunity to vote him out and elect someone who will do the job fairly and honestly. As your next Commissioner of Insurance, I promise to protect consumers and to restore accountability, transparency, and advocacy to the Department of Insurance.

If you pay an insurance bill - please don't overlook this race. Defeating "Rate Hike Mike" Causey can only happen if voters like you understand what's at stake this November.

Every donation helps fund our crucial outreach efforts – from TV ads and radio spots to polling and direct mail – all targeted toward voters who need to know how their Commissioner of Insurance has failed them. Your donation isn't just a contribution; it's an investment in making sure this critical message reaches the people who need to hear it most so that we can elect a new Commissioner of Insurance.
