Hi Steve,

A strong system of public education is the cornerstone of a thriving society. Our rural communities are full of bright young scholars who need to be nourished with good teachers, clean classrooms, new materials, and robust curricula for them to blossom into strong leaders for the next generation. With recent threats to dismantle the Department of Education, now is a more important time than ever to recognize the power of education and unite to protect it!

New Rural Project (NRP) is hosting that virtual discussion at 6:30 pm on Monday, June 30, through our Urgent Conversation series. We are excited to announce that our esteemed panel of key speakers will include Union County Public School's District 1 Representative Pastor John Kirkpatrick, North Carolina Association of Educators President Tamika Walker Kelly, and North Carolina Superintendent of Public Instruction Maurice "Mo" Green, moderated by NRP Executive Director Cynthia L. Wallace.

Here's how you can take part in the conversation:

1. Sign up here to join us virtually on Monday, June 30, at 6:30 pm.
2. After you sign up, share this event with your community via email, text, and social media.

Remember: The more voices, the more impactful the message!

With gratitude,

Caroline C. Sumpter
