Friend—right now, 100 college students are traveling the world and connecting with new communities as a part of the Obama-Chesky Scholarship for Public Service.

Each Voyager has designed their immersive work travel experience to help them deepen their understanding of their chosen field and give them a glimpse of what their career in public service could look like after they graduate.

Today, we're taking you on a virtual world tour to introduce you to some of this year's participants and give you a taste of the Summer Voyages they're on right now!

Start your voyage with a look at the students traveling around the United States, then see what the rest of the group is up to here.

United States

Voyagers are traveling to a total of 24 states and territories this summer.

Health care, criminal justice reform, and education are some of the top public service issues Voyagers are focusing on in the United States.

Voyager Spotlight

Name: Henry Stephens IV
School: Duke University
Major: Sociology
Destination: Washington, D.C.

Henry is focused on reducing barriers to economic equality. As a volunteer with the Council Office of Racial Equity in Washington, D.C., he analyzes how proposed legislation may impact historically marginalized communities' upward mobility across the district. Henry hopes this exposure to policymaking will shape his legal approach to advancing economic justice after law school.
