Friend,

Today marks 24 years since the tragic attacks of September 11, 2001. For so many of us, the memories of that day remain as vivid as ever: the shock, the sorrow, and the unity we felt as Americans.

We remember the lives lost. We remember the courage of first responders and the compassion of neighbors who became family in the face of devastation. We remember how the Muslim community at large was treated in the aftermath. We remember the resilience.

We remember how, in a single day, our nation was changed forever.

NAACP.

Remembrance calls us to carry forward the lessons of resilience, solidarity, and justice.

Twenty-four years later, our democracy still faces grave challenges. Voter suppression, racial violence, and attacks on truth and equality threaten the promise of a nation where freedom and safety belong to everyone.

In honoring those we lost, we recommit to building a nation where democracy is real, where freedom is protected, and where every community can live with dignity.

Keep Advancing,
