Friend,

As climate change intensifies across the world, communities of color face increasingly severe disasters. When floods destroy homes and wildfires burn communities, Black communities are the most vulnerable.

And yet, billion-dollar companies continue pushing to set up super-polluting data centers in Black neighborhoods. These companies think they'll get away with it because they assume the people won't have the power to fight back.

But the people have us, the NAACP. We have developed Frontline Framework Community Guiding Principles that highlight the importance of a unified approach with partners and allies from across the nation.

Solidarity builds power: We need you to join us in making a commitment to advocate for your community and halt harmful data centers!

 Please take action below by signing our emergency petition

NAACP is putting the tech industry on alert, and issuing a call to action for communities to demand more accountability from companies building new data centers.

We're starting with the world's richest man, Elon Musk.

Here's what's happening: Elon Musk quickly threw up a massive data center in Boxtown, Tennessee, a Black community. Musk bypassed all permitting and environmental reviews. Now Musk is looking to build one in Mississippi!

As you read this, the Boxtown data center is pumping the air full of toxic chemicals and cancer-causing agents.

No community should be forced to sacrifice clean air, clean water, and homes safe to live in so that billionaires can build energy-hungry facilities. We demand that public health protections have independent monitoring, healthcare access for workers and community residents, and take actions to prevent harm.

The NAACP will not stay quiet while the health of Black communities are under attack.

TAKE IMMEDIATE ACTION: 10,000 SIGNATURES ARE NEEDED TO JOIN NAACP IN ADVOCATING FOR OUR COMMUNITIES AND HALT DIRTY DATA CENTERS!
