Dear SOL Nation Community,

We are excited to announce that Bloom Into Action is returning, and this year's theme is Ladies First.

This year, we are honoring the women of the environmental justice movement—leaders, advocates, and community builders who have continued to create change in spaces that have too often been overlooked and underserved. Their work reflects resilience, vision, and transformation, and speaks directly to the heart of SOL Nation's mission.

In nature, there is a concept called pioneer species — the first plants to grow in disturbed or damaged environments. They help restore balance, stabilize the soil, and create the conditions for new life to flourish. In many ways, the women leading environmental justice efforts embody that same pioneering energy. They step into challenging conditions, work to restore and rebuild their communities, and create pathways for future generations to thrive.

We also recognize the cultural parallels that mirror this spirit. The first women of hip hop broke barriers, created space, and helped shape a movement rooted in communities that had been overlooked. That same resilience and creativity can be seen in the women who continue to lead environmental justice work today.

That connection is at the heart of this year's Bloom Into Action. At SOL Nation, we know that real change begins with those willing to lead, rebuild, and cultivate something new. Through our work in environmental justice, community restoration, and economic opportunity, we are committed to helping communities take root, recover, and thrive.

Bloom Into Action: Ladies First is a celebration of renewal, resilience, and the women whose leadership continues to inspire movements for justice, healing, and collective care.

Tickets and sponsorship packages are now available. We invite you to save the date and join us June 6th for this unforgettable occasion!

Thank you for being part of this work and this community.

With gratitude,
SOL Nation
